

Sovereign Ships

A custom yacht design and engineering studio based in Pensacola, Florida, with unusual and original creations inspired by innovative life philosophies that therefore go far beyond a simple "concept".

Ben Woodason, the founder, with a wide range of experiences, conceived the Sovereign Ships project with the ambition to inspire and empower people to achieve higher levels of individual freedom.

These self-sufficient, ocean-dwellers are complete with gardens, powered by renewable energy and made using existing technologies. They exemplify simplicity and reliability and facilitate the pleasure of living in nature with maximum comfort.

The events related to the spread of the virus, the consequent limitations to mobility, the possibility of alternative ways of carrying out some jobs, and the idea that the second home (or perhaps the new residence) could be "on the sea" rather than "by the sea" are all factors paving the way for the public's adoption the unconventional lifestyle provided by these ships.

The Ships

Ocean-going, single-family houseboats capable of hosting a family for a period of over 10 years. Comfortable and equipped with all modern comforts. Simple to use with a maintenance level that is manageable for a single owner.
